

NYLON

248

ways to be a jean genie

INCLUDING:

ag jeans

armani jeans

ck one

david kahn

denimocracy

diesel

g-star

guess

habitual

hudson

j brand

thvm atelier

true religion

won hundred

silver

3x1

olivia wilde

punk gets pretty

todye for:
hair
color
that pops!

jessica
chastain

miranda july

the horrors

norwegian
pop

denim nation

AUGUST 2011

$4.99

D 74808 02051 5

nylonmag.com

NEWS

DENIM ROUNDUP

m2f

It's common knowledge that denim is one of the few things in this world that gets better with age. That's why designer Terry Siegel of M2F (short for Made2Fade) decided to speed up the process by developing a unique yarn technology that mimics the effects of time on their jeans. "Denim has always been on my design radar," says Siegel. "But I wasn't going to do it until I was convinced that I had the technology and raw materials to design a collection that was different than any denim brand in the world." Utilizing a blend of environmentally friendly faded yarns, M2F's denim comes in a variety of styles and novel colors (chili pepper, eggplant, and nutmeg) all of which are washed and finished with the same chipping, abrasion, and comfort of your favorite pair of worn-in jeans.

CAITLIN SMITH
m2f.com

blk dnm

Swedish designer Johan Lindberg (of namesake label J. Lindberg) makes a glorious return to womenswear with his new line, BLK DNM. "I'm really excited to be designing for women again," says Lindberg. "It's a manifestation of what I have been doing during the last 20 years and I've been working really hard to develop my intuition and really follow my personal taste with no compromises." The utilitarian line is a sophisticated nod to Lindberg's '90s aesthetic, with denim in a mix of blues blacks and blues at its core. "I create things I want to see on an independent and strong woman—a mix of tailoring, leather jackets, jeans, and a pretty downtown look with a Parisian twist in what I like." The BLK DNM creative team works out of the brand's store/studio spaces dubbed "Gallerie" in New York City, Los Angeles, and London, where shoppers can browse looks while watching the designers at work. CB.us/blkdnm.com

court

"We could never find what we wanted in the denim market," says Nicole Tondre, one half of the duo behind new denim label Court. So instead of searching through vintage stores and looking for the perfect pair from other designers, Tondre, who also owns Manhattan boutiques Circa Now and Court, took it upon herself to create that elusive pair. The result is a reasonably priced collection of high-waisted jeans, offered in various styles from a skinny to a slightly flared leg, and even one major bell-bottom. "I find a lot of inspiration in '80s and '70s denim," says Tondre. "But mostly I'm looking at the right here and now and the jeans I want to be wearing."

Courtshop.com